

Permission to post in the UT Digital Repository

The UT Digital Repository (UTDR) is an online archive designed to provide open, online access to the scholarly and research works of the University of Texas at Austin, and to preserve those works for future generations. The UT Libraries manage the UTDR and offer it as a free service to all UT students, faculty and staff. Benefits to individuals and departments who contribute work to the UTDR include:

- Enhanced discoverability of their work through search engines like Google, Bing, and Yahoo
- Persistent URLs for each item which make citing work easier and more reliable
- Statistics for each item including number of downloads and where those downloads occur
- The Library commits to the long-term preservation of all deposited work

UT students are free to post their work to the UT Digital Repository, but they must have a faculty member or department representative sign off on their work prior to submission.

If you have questions before proceeding, please contact Colleen Lyon at c.lyon@austin.utexas.edu or 512-495-4244. UTDR: <http://repositories.lib.utexas.edu>

Faculty/staff permission:

I, _____, grant permission for
_____’s work to be archived in the UT Digital Repository. I understand that this work will be freely accessible online.

Sign: _____ Date: _____